ZINC contemporary is proud to present a solo exhibition of new collage works by Lynne Rotholtz.

Drawing inspiration from an inheritance of a collector's cache of vintage magazines and paper goods, Rotholtz's mixed media collages transcend the typical boundaries of color, pattern, and line. Her work ends up being a form of targeted recycling—reconstructing new meaning from ephemeral objects. Unexpected collisions of pattern and mysterious shapes appear on the page, as if floating in mid-air. She uses the tactile nature of collage—the layers, the glue, the weight of the paper—to explore new dimensions in the medium.

Rotholtz received her Bachelor of Fine Arts from the University of Washington. She currently lives in Seattle, and works in paper, textiles, and paint.
