ZINC contemporary is pleased to present an exhibition of new paintings by Seattle-based artist Jennifer Ament in Night is Day, Day is Night. The exhibition stems from questioning the narratives of our digital personas, and the politics, fame, and celebrity of social media that push us out of reality and into an illusion. The paintings in this series comment on Ament's experience with feminism online and the often misconstrued realities of the digital world. Her work further explores themes of existence, meaning and reality, and investigates what defines truth in our current era.

Emerging from a prolific printmaking background, this series features acrylic painting by the artist that introduces minimal amounts of color that are inspired by pink sands, rustic canyons, and adorned with her signature gold. Her previous body of work includes notable mural work, graphic prints, and encaustics.

Ament's work can be seen all across Seattle and her commercial work includes Starbucks stores throughout the world, Frankie & Jo's, and The Dershang Group. She has been in group exhibitions throughout the U.S. including Seattle Art Fair, Pulse Miami, Out of Sight and the Vera Project.
